Sustainable NCW Hosts “Green as a Verb” Panel on Living Sustainably

WENATCHEE – “Green” describes a way of life that is committed to care for the environment. There are many shades of green just as there are many ways to incorporate sustainability into our lives—in our homes, our workplaces, our schools, our ways of getting around, and what we choose to buy and do.

Sustainable NCW invites our community to “Green as a Verb,” a curated panel discussion shining a light on ways of adopting green practices and perspectives.

SNCW is hosting “Green as a Verb” at 7pm on Wednesday, November 12th at the Wenatchee Valley Museum and Cultural Center. Panelists include four local pioneers walking the talk.

Would you like to:

- Leave the car at home and bike commute?
- Go local with your food, either from a local farmer or your own garden?
- Take those broken items out of the closet and repair them rather than buy new?
- Understand how sustainability is intertwined with community, accessibility and sharing our voice and values with decision makers?

Bike riding aficionado Connor Barrows, organic farm owner Deb Stansbery, repair wizard Larry Selden, and environmental justice advocate Tona Chacon will inspire attendees with their stories and through a thoughtful discussion led by community connector and storyteller Gerardo Perez-Guerrero.

We welcome Spanish speakers to our event, which will include simultaneous Spanish interpretation via headsets.

Doors open at 6:30pm with an opportunity to talk with panelists and tabling nonprofits driving change to make our community greener. Light refreshments will be available, and the event is free but donations are appreciated to help cover event costs.
